Andres Started Shooting when Girl Jilted Him

Roy Spanish-American

Another of the near tragedies that have made this town unsafe to live in was pulled off Wednesday night. Andres Abel, a young Mexican from the canyons, came to town and it is said, got a few drinks inside him then went to the home of Mrs. Pacheco, where he is said to have been paying court to the lady's daughter, Miss Josephine Pacheco, one of the eighth grade girls in the Roy school.

Just what happened is not clear enough for publication, but it is reported that because the young lady refused to marry him he threatened them and when they ran for safety to the P. P. Branch home across the street, he emptied his revolver after them. Fortunately no one was hit, but the door at which they sought to enter was perforated by a bullet and several bullets pierced the walls, one going under a sofa on which the Branch children were sitting, one piercing the warming oven of the kitchen range and bedding in the opposite wall and others barely missing occupants of the room.

The young man then left and Mrs. Pacheco swore out a warrant for his arrest.

Constable Steve Morris took the warrant and attempted to arrest him in Edmer Evans' saloon. Abel struck him with a revolver and knocked him down and escaped. Several others are said to have aided him in resisting the officer.

forest with traps, guns or other weapons for hunting without having in his possession a proper hunting license, is prima facie evidence of violation of the game law. If arrested under such circumstances for a violation of the game law, the burden would be upon the hunter to prove that he was merely trapping the wild animals for which a license to hunt is not required."
